THE PRESIDENT'S CORNER

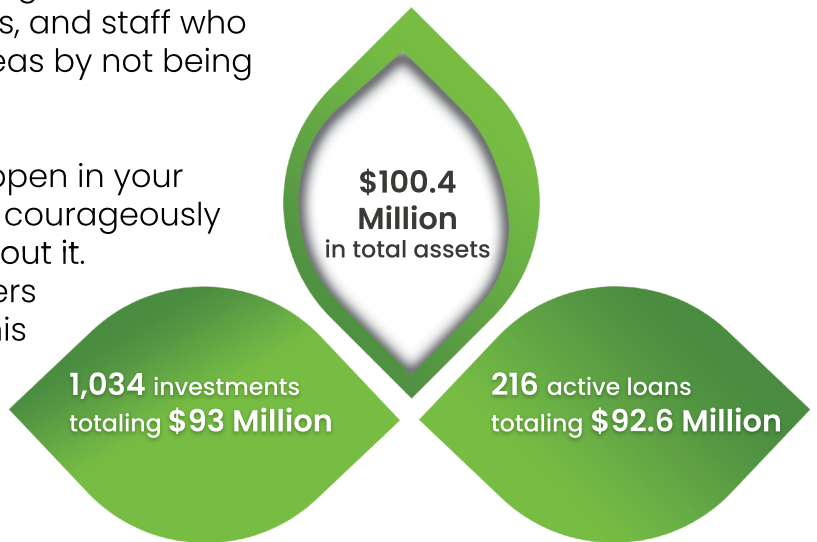

What if we....? Those three words are the launching pad of great developments. Ideas may start in the mind, but they never come to fruition if they are never spoken. Our beloved past-president, Stephen Drury, is famous for saying "If you can see it before you see it, then you'll see it." He relentlessly challenged us to dream big. I would like to take his quote a step further by saying, "When you say what you see, you allow others to see it come true with you."

The Loan Fund has always relied heavily on a third-party service provider to help us underwrite and close loans. This year, we brought these services in-house by hiring key staff members and by implementing essential software programs that allow us to process loans in a much more efficient manner. These necessary changes began with "What if we..." questions.

Operational efficiencies are essential in business. But they do not happen by accident. They require diligent thinking, questioning, debate, and research. I'm so thankful for our board members, legal counsel, auditors, and staff who continue to dream and develop big ideas by not being afraid to ask, "What if we..."

What positive developments could happen in your church, job, or community if you would courageously ask, "What if we....?" Don't just dream about it. Ask about it. Talk about it. Join with others who will help you find the answers to this change-inspiring question. Say it with me, "What if we....?"
